

The boxes that contain the balls can be "clicked" away so that the balls vibrate in place within invisible boxes.

Provide a justification of how this supports your reading of disciplinary mechanisms.

- boxes: an attempt to structure space
- “invisible” (why not absent?) boxes: no clear sense of a vanishing point/observer.
- however, the gaze shifts from a higher-order observer to the subject himself (self-policing) and/or other subjects (mutual regulation); the balls use one another as a point of reference to structure space
